

Email Templates

Navigate to Email Templates

In order to find your current default email templates, you will have to login as an admin and navigate to the system config cog. From this drop-down menu, you should see Email Content.

Editing Default Email Templates

You should be able to use these codes in the smart editor to the right and it will display the appropriate information to the desired user. The smart editor also gives you the ability to add images and format your messages.

Email Template Fields - What do they do?

Label	The label field is how you will identify your email templates.
Type	The type is an nonadjustable value that lets you know the type of the email template.
Language	This field contains two options that allow you to select between French or English.
Layout	Select the layout that surrounds your messaging, this allows you to have multiple different layouts for different email templates. These layouts include your email header, footer, and its styling. You can create or adjust email template layouts under System Config → Email Headers & Footers .
Subject	This is the subject of the message you wish to send under the current email template.
HTML Content	Here you will write the message your users will receive. You can insert images, shortcodes, and use the smart editor, to format your messages just like other word processors.

Label	The label field is how you will identify your email templates.
Text Content	This section is a simple text editor that does not offer the use of shortcodes or any formatting. This is simply for the message itself and not necessarily the
